New Joint Training Centres for better Education in the Veterinary Sector

Vetnordic A/S and Eickemeyer – Medicinteknik For Dyr læger ApS have entered into a strategic partnership and merges their course activities. The goal is clear: To create the strongest and most professional facilities for the continuing education of veterinarians, veterinary nurses, and other employees in the veterinary sector in Denmark and the Nordic region.

The new partnership will officially take effect on 1 August 2026, but the work to develop upcoming training programmes, physical facilities, and administrative systems begins now. After the summer break, the first full course programme is expected to be ready - shared between Course Centre East in Albertslund and Course Centre West in Vojens.

A Stronger Joint Offering for the Entire Sector

Vetnordic specialises in consumables, and Eickemeyer in medical equipment. The new collaboration brings together the strong competencies and solutions from both companies. This creates new shared concepts with enhanced professional depth, increased capacity, and a broader range of courses than before. The course centres will also provide improved opportunities for activities in collaboration with other industry partners and with existing educational institutions for both veterinarians and veterinary nurses.

This includes:

- Professional courses for veterinarians and veterinary nurses
- Practical training in fully equipped vet labs
- Theme days and masterclasses
- Workshops and extended course programmes
- In-house training at clinics
- Exhibitions, large meetings, and major events for the entire industry

At the same time, the best elements of both companies' current course centres will be preserved: skilled instructors and course organisers, familiar formats, strong academic quality, and close relationships with participants.

The CEOs: "We are building something that becomes much stronger together."

Gert Helenius, CEO of Eickemeyer, states:

"Continuing education is a crucial part of modern veterinary practice, and expectations keep rising. By joining forces with Vetnordic, we can achieve far more than individually. We gain better facilities, a strong combined team of instructors, and a much wider range of courses."

Britt Toft Ingvertsen, CEO of Vetnordic, adds:

"Our goal is to create the most professional and ambitious platform for continuing education in Denmark and the Nordic region. This partnership allows us to accelerate development - both academically and organisationally. We look forward to offering the industry a learning environment of the highest standard."

Course Managers: A Unified Team with Strong Academic Expertise

The well-known course staff - and likely also the instructors - from both Vetnordic and Eickemeyer will continue as part of the new organisation. This means that participants will still meet the same faces - now with even more resources and development opportunities.

Kristina Abildgaard, Course Manager at Eickemeyer, says:

"We look forward to bringing our experience together in one large team. We can now develop even stronger parallel programmes, enhance teaching quality, and offer more differentiated courses for both newly graduated and highly experienced participants."

Mia Søderlund, Course Manager at Vetnordic, adds:

"This gives us a unique opportunity to create a complete educational setup for the entire veterinary sector. We can think more long-term, work more specialised, and develop programmes that match the clinics' needs even better than today."

New and improved physical facilities

The collaboration also includes a modernisation and expansion of the physical facilities:

- In Albertslund a brand-new joint vet lab will be established to support practical workshops and advanced hands-on courses. The centre includes a vet lab, auditorium, classrooms of various sizes, a canteen, and meeting rooms.
- In Vojens, the existing course facilities have been modernised and expanded over the past two years, offering professional teaching spaces, attractive indoor and outdoor areas, and top-class facilities for participants who bring their dogs to courses.

These new surroundings support the ambition to create deep academic learning, informal networking, and great experiences for all participants.

A Long-Term Competence Boost for the Entire Sector

The veterinary sector is rapidly evolving, and both veterinarians and veterinary nurses increasingly seek specialised knowledge, practical courses, and targeted educational programmes.

The collaboration between Vetnordic and Eickemeyer is a direct response to this development.

“In the end, this is about improving quality across the entire sector,” says Britt Toft Ingvertsen.

“When employees become more skilled, patient care improves - and that benefits the animals, the clinics, and the clients.”

“We aim to be the focal point for lifelong learning in the veterinary profession,” adds Gert Helenius.

“This partnership gives us the strength to develop new educational formats and raise the bar even higher.”

About the Partnership

- The partnership formally takes effect on 1 August 2026
